“WHO ARE YOU?”

PASTOR ANDY KINDER

Who are you? Who are you in this world? Who are you in the church? Who are you in your community and city? Who are you at work? Who are you at home? Our lives are full of responsibility. We each have our own role to play in the world. Some are mothers at home and supervisors at work. Some are husbands at home and teachers at church. Whatever your role is, I ask you to pause as you read this article and ask yourself, “who am I?” This is not based on comparing yourself to other people or looking to your past and taking a poll of your past mistakes. Rather, I am asking you “who are you” today? Who are you in Christ. As humans, we have the ungodly desire to compare ourselves to everyone around us. We see success quicker in someone else’s life and we think we are not good enough. Social media has added to this farce. We view the smiling person that just got a promotion at work in one picture and in the next picture we see the same person spending quality time with his or her family. The real question is, “what do you not see?” You may not see the argument that occurred before the family photo. Or, you may not realize that this person was the only candidate for the position they were promoted to. Social media is not the best judge of someone’s success or significance. With this said, “who are you?” Remember, who you are should always be grounded in Christ. So, “Who are you in Christ?”
