WHEN FEAR USES CHAOS TO CONTROL

Fear is one of the enemy’s most effective weapons, and chaos is often the environment in which fear thrives. When life becomes uncertain, circumstances change unexpectedly, or problems seem to multiply, fear begins to whisper that everything is falling apart. Before long, we find ourselves reacting to circumstances rather than resting in the promises of God. Fear does not always need a real danger to gain control. Sometimes, all it needs is uncertainty. It fills our minds with questions, magnifies our problems, and convinces us that we must somehow control everything around us. The more we attempt to control what we cannot control, the more overwhelmed we become. But Scripture reminds us in 1 Corinthians 14:33 that “God is not the author of confusion, but of peace.” While chaos may surround us, it does not have to rule within us. Consider the disciples when a violent storm arose on the Sea of Galilee. The winds were raging, the waves were crashing, and fear had overtaken their hearts. Yet Jesus was asleep in the boat. The same storm that terrified the disciples could not disturb the peace of Christ. When Jesus arose, He spoke three powerful words: “Peace, be still” (Mark 4:39). What a reminder that peace is not necessarily the absence of a storm, but the presence of the Savior! The enemy wants us so consumed with what might happen that we lose sight of what God has already promised. Fear pulls our attention toward uncertainty, while faith redirects our hearts toward the One who never changes. Do not allow the chaos around you to become the master of the peace within you. Fear seeks control through chaos, but Christ offers victory through trust.
